hiv aids has been named the sub saharan disease in countries that have achieved significant declines in hiv prevalence young people have registered the biggest behavioural changes it means they hold the keys not only to our understanding of the epidemic but more importantly to the efforts required to stem the tide of infections however the majority of young people are ignorant of how to prevent transmission have low compliance to condom use which is in some cases accentuated by misconceptions about hiv aids transmission and have insufficient knowledge regarding transmission and avoidance behaviours as such consensus on feasible preventive interventions target young people particularly those in schools it is on this premise that the book unlocks the key pillars in effective hiv aids education policies and practices the study has drawn upon the experiences of selected urban schools in malawi to explore the needs of young people in classroom the extent to which the classroom practices respond to the needs and the factors influencing these using questionnaires interviews lesson observations and document analysis malawi typically represents most sub saharan african countries in terms of challenges faced by education systems given the similar cultural settings of the people of sub saharan africa the findings and recommendations of the study generalises to the education systems of sub saharan africa to a greater extent the book shows the need for open discussion climates on hiv aids issues despite a conservative cultural and religious adult world that is not open it has also identified a need for explicit and accurate knowledge on hiv aids issues opportunities to acquire behavioural skills for hiv prevention and involvement of external speakers in classroom hiv aids education current classroom practice does not address the pupils needs adequately factors influencing this can be linked to lack of policies responsive to culture and religion ineffective and inadequate teaching policy guidelines and lack of a policy prioritising hiv aids education the findings suggest that in future effective hiv aids education needs to be informed by the pupils needs to address these needs support from the wider society and related policies coupled with appropriate management and classroom practice will be required the book is therefore an indispensable tool for education systems in sub saharan africa it provides an effective model for this booklet is addressed to high school teachers discussing what many researchers consider the most important year of high school perhaps the most important year of school so far freshman year will set the stage for whether a student graduates and whether he or she will be ready for college citing years of study the consortium on chicago school research advocates that grades and attendance are the two most important issues to be faced during high school and that the two are closely related noting that more than 95 percent of students with a b average or better in their freshman year graduate and have an 80 percent chance of finishing high school with at least a 3.0 gpa the brief notes that nearly 90 percent of freshmen who miss less than a week of school per semester graduate and that freshmen who miss more than two weeks of school fail on average at least two classes these findings are irrespective of elementary school performance and 8th grade test results for chicago students who want to graduate from college that b average in high school is what it will take to succeed in college teachers are urged to help their students set the stage for future success by 1 reaching out to struggling just below average freshmen who miss one or two weeks of school 2 prompt and early intervention to each student whose grades and attendance start to slip 3 coherent class organization so that students know exactly what they need to do to earn good grades and 4 working collaboratively with colleagues to take collective responsibility for the whole school for student edition see ed498356 for parent edition see ed498355
